Epstein was born in Liverpool, England, in 1934. He was the son of a successful furniture store owner. Epstein was a bright and ambitious child, and he excelled in school. After graduating from high school, Epstein worked for his father's business. But he soon realized that he was not cut out for a life in business. He was more interested in music and entertainment.

In 1961, Epstein saw the Beatles perform at a local club. He was immediately impressed by their talent and their potential. Epstein approached the Beatles and offered to become their manager. The Beatles were hesitant at first, but they eventually agreed. Epstein quickly set to work transforming the Beatles into a professional band. He helped them to develop their sound, their image, and their stage presence. He also negotiated their recording contract with EMI.

Under Epstein's management, the Beatles quickly became one of the most popular bands in the world. They released a string of hit singles and albums, and they toured extensively. Epstein was a master of self-promotion, and he helped to create the Beatles' iconic image. He was also a brilliant businessman, and he helped to make the Beatles one of the richest bands in history.

But Epstein's success came at a price. He was a workaholic, and he often neglected his own health. He also struggled with depression and anxiety. In 1967, Epstein died of a drug overdose at the age of 32. His death was a devastating blow to the Beatles, and it is still mourned by fans around the world.

Brian Epstein was a complex and fascinating character. He was a brilliant businessman, a loyal friend, and a visionary leader. He was also a deeply troubled man. But despite his flaws, Epstein was a key figure in the Beatles' success. He was the man who made the Beatles the Beatles.
