Through simple, age-appropriate language and colorful illustrations, this book provides children with a concrete explanation of deployment and helps them to develop coping mechanisms for dealing with the separation. This book is an invaluable resource for any family facing the challenges of deployment.

What is deployment?

Deployment is when a parent is sent away from home to serve in the military. Deployments can be short or long, and they can take place anywhere in the world.

Why do parents get deployed?

Parents get deployed to protect our country and our way of life. They may be sent to fight in a war, to help with a natural disaster, or to provide support for other countries.

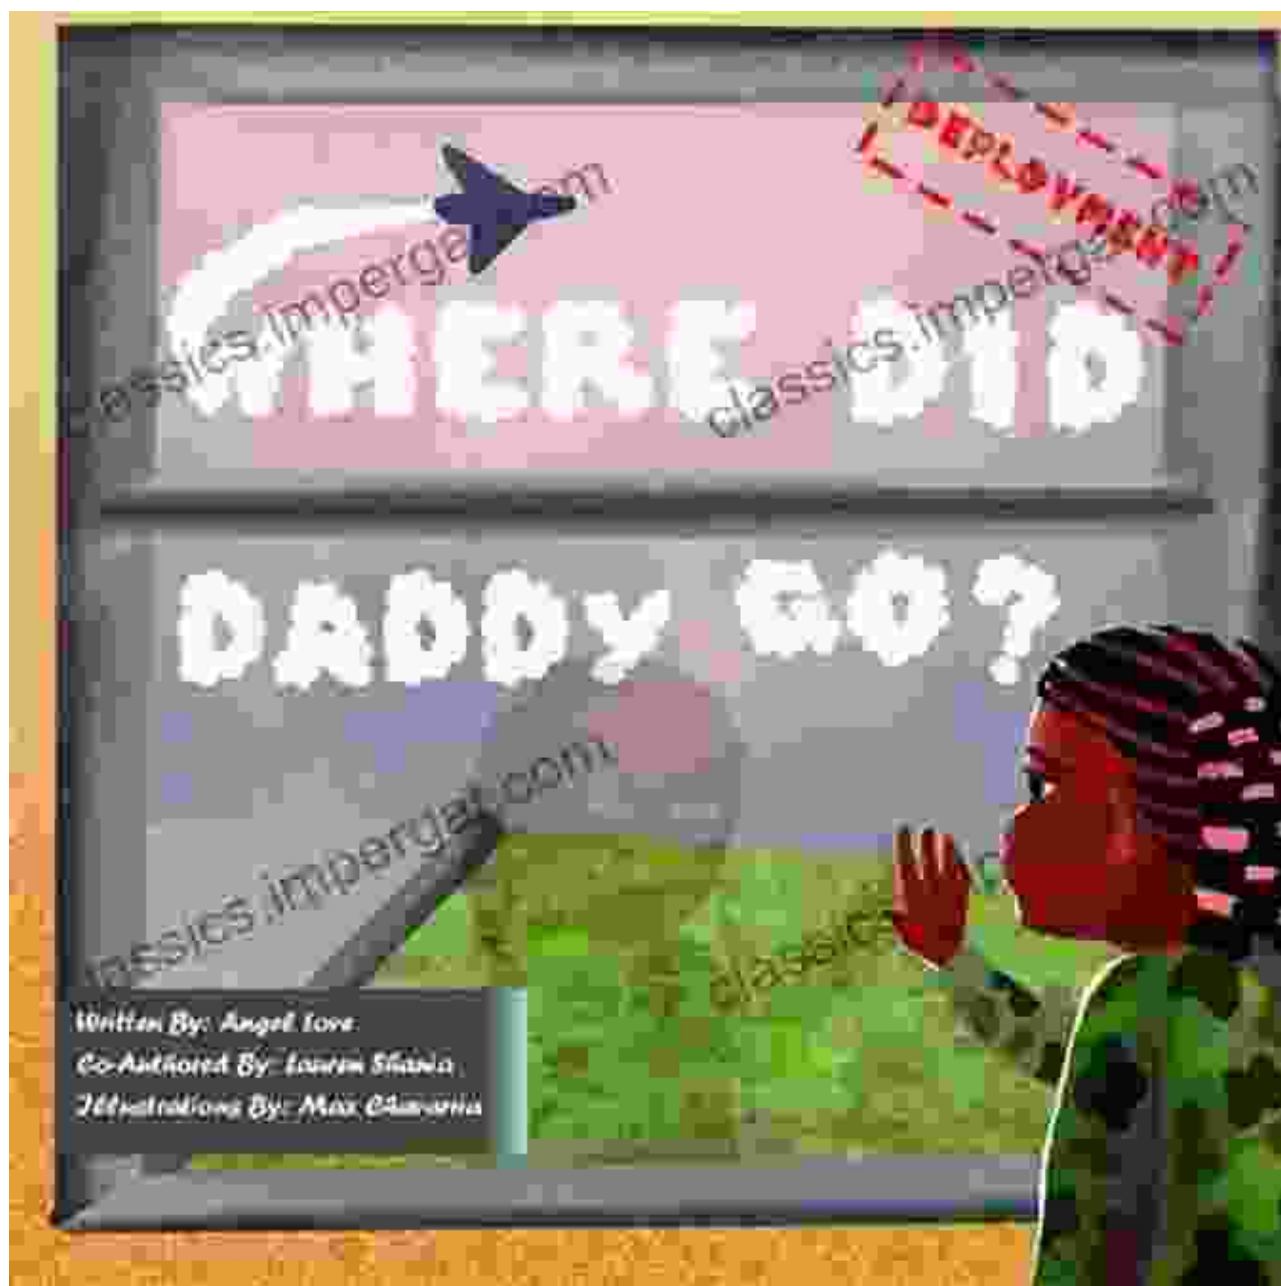

How can I help my child cope with deployment?

There are many things you can do to help your child cope with deployment. Some helpful tips include:

- Talk to your child about deployment in a way that they can understand.
- Answer your child's questions honestly and openly.
- Reassure your child that you love them and that you will be back.
- Create a countdown calendar to help your child track the days until you return.
- Send your child letters and care packages.
- Talk to your child about their feelings and let them know that it is okay to be sad or scared.
- Seek support from other family members, friends, or a therapist if you need help coping with deployment.
